

GESA – RACP GUT SCHOOL

The inaugural GESA/RACP 'Gut School' will be held at Lancemore Hill, in the Macedon Ranges (near Melbourne) over the weekend of 20th and 21st November 2010. All gastroenterology trainees are encouraged to attend and participate.

The weekend is generously supported by Janssen Cilag and Olympus Australia. Presentations on the Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning will cover areas of the curriculum that are important, but not well covered in everyday clinical practice at teaching hospitals.

An Introductory Endoscopy Workshop, including simulators, will be held on the Friday afternoon/evening and Saturday morning. New trainees and those completing their first year are encouraged to attend this to gain 'hands on' experience and raise questions with faculty members.

Airport transfers, accommodation and catering will be provided. Trainees will be required to register and pay the appropriate fee, and organise their own airfares. Note that airfares should be tax deductible and your hospital/State Health Departments may have schemes in place to provide further travel support. In addition, travel grants will be available to trainees residing in areas where travel time is lengthy and expensive. Information concerning the grants will be found on the Society website: www.gesa.org.au

Places are limited so if you wish to attend please register your interest by 31st August 2010.
